Columbus, on Friday night last, virtually terminated one of the most interesting and protracted contests which has been had in Ohio for many years. The opposition to Benator Wade in the southern portion of the State, one year ago, arose from dislike of his "radicalism," while in Northern Ohio it was principally from personal animosity arising from his supposed part in the appointments to federal offices. These are spoken of as the grounds of the opposition of the leaders; the mass of the people have always been in favor of his re-election .-Had a popular vote been taken either one year ago or at the present time, we have which to look for a recommendation for no doubt that Mr. Wade would have re- enlisting colored soldiers would be such ceived a very handsome majority in the journals as the Boston Pest and the Lou-State. may well be gratified at this result. But it is not his personal friends alone who will rejoice. The friends of loyality and politloal integrity; the upholders of an unflinehing firmness against all rebellion, North or South ; the believers in the most wigorous prosecution of the war against the rebellion and all its aiders and abettors, will all exult that so true and bold an advocate of the right is still to have a seat in the Senate and a voice in the conduct of the nation through its fearful peril .-The country is not yet at peace, but wants warriers as well as statesmen in its council halls. And thus it is that the loyal nation, as well as true-hearted Ohio, will take renewed courage in welcoming back to his

P. Wade. We quote from the correspondence of the Cincinnati Gazette the proceedings of the nominating caucus:

"At the second meeting of the caucus to-night the officers of last evening resumed their places, and business proceeded without excitament. The call of roll showed that there were twenty Senators and forty-six Representatives present-enough to elect in joint convention. The absent Senators were Grosebeck, McBurney and Robison, (Union Democrats;) and Ready, (Republican.) Representatives Bartram, Bates, Crane, Crause, Dickman, Plagg Glesoner, Gernsenlus, Huston, Lind, Masns, McClellan, Sieg, Sayler, Thorp, Whitney and Wilkins, (Union Democrate;) Kock and Marsh, (Americans;) Fee or Vinton, Griswold and Keyser of Noble, (Republicans.) Mr. Brachman moved that he name of Sayler be stricken from the roll. [Laughter.]

"Dr. Howe, on behalf of the Wade Republicans, offered a reply to the paper submitted by Bartram, last evening, showing why they could not withhold his as a candidate. It sets forth that much of the opposition to Mr. Wade has its foundation in prejudice, resting on want of correct information. Wade was never assiciated with the old Liberty party, and only left the Whig party when it me defunct. He was ever an antislavery man, even when the Democratic party assumed to be much more so. When the rebellion threatened the country he rose above party prejudices and battled for the Union cause and organization. read the following extract from a private

"Our Democratic Union friends are worthy of all praise for the firm manner n which they stand by the Government in these times of peril, and we should duly appreciate the sacrifice they have made, and extend to them a liberality and confidence worthy their patriotism."
"In this manner, said Dr. Howe, con-

"Mr. Eggleson didn't think it would be proper for the caucus to take any action "Some very excellent remarks were made by Senator McVeigh, a Union Dem-ocrat of Fairfield county, who, in fact, re-sides in the same county with Edson B. Olds. It was he who withdrew the name of Ewing last night, and cast his vote for Wade amid applause.
"He objected to the passage of the resolution, as the caucus had no authority, in advance, to withdraw the name of any andidate. He had been in the caucus held by the Union Democrats, but considered that that request was the end of it, and no action could be taken on it. "After some further discussion the reslutions were laid on the table, and the aucus proceeded to ballot for Senator.

"Mr. Eggleston nominated the Hon. B. Wade. (Applause.)
"Mr. Gunckel nominated Hon. Robert F. Wade. C. Schenck. (Applause.)
The result of the first ballot was as folws: Wade, 56 votes; Schenck, 6; blank,

Whole number of votes cast, 65. " Wade was declared nominated, smid congratulations and good feeling. " Senstor Gunckel then arose and spoke as follows: Mr. Chairman, I nominated General Schenck without his knowledge, ecause I believed him a wise statesman and would do honor to this State; but a very large majority of this body have hown their preference for another man, and I do to-night what I know Mr. Schenek would do, and I now move the nomination
